To provide playground cover for four elementary schools in the Konociti USD. Currently we are using wood finer, and would like a longer lasting, safer surface. The bark breaks down over time and needs to be refilled, and the sand at times is used by feral cats as a litter box. Ground rubber, made from recycled rubber would provide better shock absorption in the event of a fall thereby providing a safer surface for the students.

This project could place approximately 252,000 lbs of California waste tires in an area roughly 11,000 square feet. Our small, rural school has been looking for a means to provide a safer, long-term approach to the ground cover in our playground area and the tire-derived product would furnish the school playground with a more secure and economical play area that sets an example for our entire community on the importance of recycling efforts in California.
